

JACOB SCHIFF SEES WAR WITH JAPAN AS STRONG POSSIBILITY

And these same violent and violent the officers to and writing and shouting again and batteries upon the Japanese in City and many of them who oppo of peacefulness and domestic and being made the Japanese batteries upon each other for pieces of weapons and other for Japanese laborers who were active in demand and many of the in the city and many of the attempt to persuade many Japanese laborers who should be refused from leaving the employment the corporations and refusing to time or renew it, and by intimidat threats of violence and destruction driving others to intimidate and threat (Continued on Page Four)

The Irish, when asked for some regulation of their devotions by Nemo's lures on the burning cross, and the participation in the meeting, with one accord, announced their willingness to become members of any old kind.

Notwithstanding the fact that the challenge was not accepted, and the patrol wagon remained in the shed, the Waterloo of the Rollers arrived, and was as complete as was Napoleon's. A doughty warrior, in the shape of Mr. Tweedie, who represents the Examiner with a bunch of papers under his arm and a command of Irish wit and eloquence, which immediately won the large crowd advanced to the attack. Tweedie talked for an hour and here are a few excerpts, addressed to his disciples of the new religion: "Why do you claim to be Christians? Why did you bring all these crosses here?" (the leader of the B. R.'s went long whistles) "and now let them starve. You're full of hot air. You talk about love, but you don't know what it means. There isn't one amongst you would give a nickel to help out your poor countrymen, being starved down a Mountain Island. You're rotten. You're no good. Stop talking about religion, going to hell and get out and do some work and help out your countrymen."

The only time the holy people were ever done up was on this occasion. Protestations from them did no good. The press representative was inexorable, and the crowd cheered him on. He quit only when the outfit beat

Dowu in Kewalo a few families were

James, the famous Shakespearean actor, died here today from heart failure.

Dowu in Kewalo a few families were ere, and placed under an overseeing quarantine, dangerous.

1 died here today from heart failure